

Moderna CEO Admits Covid 'Vaccines' Were Developed 'in 2019' Because He Knew 'Pandemic' Was Coming

Moderna CEO Stéphane Bancel has boasted to fellow World Economic Forum (WEF) members that his company developed Covid mRNA "vaccines" in 2019 because they knew there was "going to be a pandemic."

Bancel gloated to WEF globalists that he told other executives at Moderna that their advanced knowledge of the Covid pandemic would ensure that they would "make a billion dollars next year" when the coronavirus emerged.

The pharmaceutical head made the admission during a WEF panel discussion where he was asked about "vaccine development."

Bancel was asked how Moderna and other vaccine makers are able to keep ahead of new variants and how his company was able to produce Covid mRNA injections so quickly.

He responded by touting the "great news" that Moderna was already producing "vaccines" at "full capacity" by 2020, the year the pandemic was declared.

"When the pandemic happened, Moderna had made a hundred thousand doses," Bancel told WEF members.

He then revealed that Moderna had made the Covid shots "in 2019 for a whole year."

"I remember walking after Davos into the office of my manufacturing and I say, 'I will make a billion dollars next year.'

"And they look at me a bit funny and say 'What?'

"And I say, 'Yeah, we will make a billion dollars next year – there's going to be a pandemic.'"

Meanwhile, experts around the world are continuing to raise concerns about the long-term impact of the mass vaccination agenda.

As Slay News previously reported, a recent study conducted by a group of leading American medical doctors has confirmed that Moderna's Covid mRNA "vaccines" can trigger high-grade sarcoma – a type of "turbo cancer" that grows and spreads more quickly than normal.

The study, led by Professor Edward Bae of the State University of New York (SUNY), detailed the case of a patient who was diagnosed with high-grade sarcoma shortly after receiving an mRNA injection.

The researchers were able to identify the second dose of Moderna mRNA “vaccine” as the injection that triggered the cancer.

The surging cancers among the Covid-vaccinated have led a growing number of leading doctors and scientists to speak out against the shots.

Last year, a world-renowned vaccine expert presented evidence during congressional testimony showing that pharmaceutical giant Moderna knows its Covid mRNA shots cause cancer.

Dr. Robert Malone, the inventor of mRNA vaccine technology, testified during a hearing on Capitol Hill led by Republican Rep. Marjorie Taylor Greene (R-GA).

During his testimony, Malone presented the patent for Moderna’s Covid vaccine.

Moderna’s patent shows that its COVID-19 vaccine vials contain billions of DNA fragments.

Those fragments, along with other contaminants, are linked to birth defects and cancer.

In the patent, Moderna admits that contaminants in the shots cause cancer.

However, as Malone highlights in his testimony, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) apparently ignored this admission when approving the shots for public use.

Malone argues that executives and scientists at Moderna and Pfizer must have known about the risks.

Dr. Malone warned that those who have received the mRNA injections would likely be at risk from “anything that is associated with DNA damage.”

In terms of DNA damage, Malone explains that “birth defects and cancer [are] the most notable ones.”
